FANWOOD.

The second public lecture, on "Sculpture in New York," was delivered by Mr. Quincy Adams, on the evening of Thursday, October 10th. Mr. Adams was introduced to the gathering by Principal Currier and began his lecture shortly after 8:15 o'clock.

With Mr. Thomason interpreting his remarks, he opened his lecture by telling of the wonderful statues located in New York, many of which are the work of talented American sculptors. Many of these statues are situated in such places that it is difficult for a pedestrian to get a glimpse of them. For instance, in West 23d Street there is a statue of Abraham Lincoln. This statue is of great magnitude, but the passing trolleys on one side, traffic on the other side, and a cross-town system to the left, put the statue entirely out of sight. In front of the Tribune building on Park Row, is a gigantic statue of Horace Greeley. Horace Greeley was one of the greatest writers of his time. He poses in an arm chair as though he is sleeping, and Mr. Adams said if the sculptor had posed Greeley in an attitude of writing some book, then the statue would easily be distinguished by school children as that of a writer.

Mr. Adams is an artist by profession and the Secretary of the Art Commission of New York City.

He spoke for about fifteen minutes and then the first stereoscopic view, showing a monument dedicated to the memory of the brave men who died during the war, was thrown on the screen. This monument is imperfect, and Mr. Adams told us that all forms of art lack perfection.

Most of the statues and monuments that we find in New York, are presented to the city as gifts. In Central Park there are a number of excellent monuments and statues erected to decorate the park and for the pleasure of the people.

Consider the equestrian statue erected in New York in honor of General Sherman. He sits erect on a veritable war horse with his cloak thrown back. This is a wonderful piece of sculpture, and anybody can recognize the figure as that of a soldier during war time.

Above all take the statue dedicated to Abraham Lincoln. This work has in very truth an accent of dignity and charm, an accent of profound yet simple sentiment. Lincoln is represented standing in front of a chair from which he has just risen and is about to speak. In this pose it is said he is making a speech in which he is freeing the slaves.

Thousands of persons view the statue of Nathan Hale, now standing on the outskirts of City Hall. Nathan Hale stands erect and is about to face death. During the Revolutionary War he entered the British camp and pretended to be a Tory schoolmaster. When captured he was sentenced to death. His last words, which are inscribed on his statue, are "I only regret that I have but one life to lose for my country."

In the Museum of Natural History stands a magnificent statue of General George Washington, "the father of his country." This statue is so exalted in the world of art, that it is said to be the finest statue of Washington that has ever been made. It was made by a Frenchman.

Mr. Adams now began to speak of the brilliant sculpture to be found in the various public buildings in the city. Some of these statues reach a height of twelve feet and are completed through persistent toil.

An excellent tablet, erected in memory of those who perished during the Slocum disaster, is to be found in the downtown section of this city. Mr. Adams said this was one of the finest specimens of art he has ever seen, even though it lacks perfection in some ways.

Of the numerous busts and statues to be found in the City Hall, the bust of General Washington is classified as being the best.

In front of Cooper Institute can be seen an artistic statue of Peter Cooper, the founder of the above Institute.

Mr. Adams' lecture proved to be of especial interest to the pupils, as he pointed out and described most of the statues and monuments the pupils have seen in this city.

His lecture ended at 9:15 o'clock, amid a round of applause. The third lecture, for next Thursday evening, by Mr. Peter MacQueen, is entitled "Egypt and the Nile."

The forty-seventh annual election of officers of the Fanwood Literary Association was held in the chapel last Saturday evening, October 12th. On Friday last the officers and directors of last year's Association held a meeting in the library of the Institution where a regular nomination ticket was made.

The meeting was formally called to order upon the arrival of the Councillor, Principal Currier. Councillor Currier had a few words to say in regard to the progress made by the Association last year. He then called upon Dr. Fox who had a few words to say pertaining to the uplift and advancement of the Association. He said the programs given by the various classes last year were fully up to the standard and that he wanted the pupils to entertain the Association with more literature than the kind of dialogues they have been giving during the past year.

The minutes of the last annual meeting were then read by the Secretary, Miss Alice Tracy, and approved as correct.

During the past year the number of readings, lectures, debates, dialogues, etc., given by the Association runs as follows:

Readings 77, lectures 9, debates 9, plays 14, reunions 3, and 11 moving picture entertainments.

The tellers, Misses Lucille C. Lef and Wanda Makowski, and Messrs. W. G. Jones and Frank S. Thomason, were chosen by the Councillor. Only those belonging to the fourth grade and up were permitted to vote, and so the ballots were immediately distributed. The voting was completed in a short time and then the teller began to sum up the results of the votes. After a five-minute consultation between the tellers, the results were handed over to the Councillor and then read before the members. The officers elected are:

Thomas Francis Fox
1ST VICE-PRESIDENT

MEMBERS OF THE EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE

The newly-elected officers were next called upon the platform for a few words of gratification. Each made a short speech and expressed their thanks for the honor conferred upon them, and wished that the association of 1912-1913 would shine brighter and go higher in progress than any years of the past. On account of the absence of the treasurer, Miss Burchard, and five of the directors, their thanks and best wishes for the Association was tendered through Mr. Jones and Mr. Thomason. Adjournment was next voted for at nine minutes past nine o'clock.

During the past week the pupils had an excellent panoramic view of the war vessels, armored cruisers, destroyers, torpedo boats, gunboats, submarines, colliers and hospital ships, assembled in the Hudson River. Last Saturday evening, and again on Sunday, the assemblage of pupils viewed the magnificent illumination of the fleet from the front of the Institution. At seven o'clock sharp a signal was given from Admiral Osterhaus' flagship, the Connecticut and then the battleships were outlined in lights. Next came a play of searchlights which lighted the Hudson River for seven and one half miles. All the ships displayed their number with big electric lights.

The President of the United States reviewed the fleet last Monday, after an inspection by Secretary of the Navy Meyer. The mobilization then ended on the forenoon of October 15th, by the fleet passing out to sea in review before the President.

The October 5th issue of the Sea Cliff and Glen Cove News, contained two columns of sporting news, pertaining to the excellent playing of Frank M. Nimmo, during the championship game of Nassau County, between the Sea Cliff and Hempstead teams.

Quite a number of pupils witnessed the parade of Uncle Sam's blue jackets last Saturday afternoon, from free standing seats at 59th Street and Broadway.

Last Tuesday afternoon a new classification was perfected under the direction of Principal Currier. The classification took up about two hours, and then the pupils with their teachers were assigned to new class rooms.

Mr. Edgerton L. Winthrop, Chairman of the Executive Committee was a visitor again last Tuesday afternoon.

The second parade and review of the season was run off last Sunday afternoon, with Colonel Currier as reviewing officer. Quite a large crowd was on hand to see the drill outside the gate and had the first opportunity of seeing the cadets in the Butts' Rifle Drill.

Prof. Jones conducted the Sunday morning service, using the following text, "The Field is the World." Mr. Iles, one of the new teachers, delivered his first sermon of the term, using "In all things willing to be honest" as his subject. In the evening Prof. Jones rendered another one of his adventurous stories.

The chief attraction on Columbus Day, October 12th, was the baseball game between Fanwood and the Broadway A. C. The feature of the game was the sensational twirling of Moster and Sabella. Sabella sprung a surprise on all the "fans" by his excellent pitching. This was the last game of the season and a well-earned victory too. The score is appended below:

Simon De Montfort.

During the reign of Henry III, John's son, there was another struggle between the king and the people. The king filled the court with his foreign friends and even granted to them the royal castles which should have belonged to English nobles. Not only this, but he broke the laws of the country to suit himself as his father had done, and made the poor people pay great sums of money which he and the foreigners of his court spent on their own pleasure. People grew very dissatisfied, but as yet there was no one to act as leader.

While affairs were in this state, another foreigner landed in England, a young man named Simon De Montfort. He had been forced to leave France, and, as he was heir to large English estates, he did homage to King Henry for his land and became an English citizen. At first, he and the king were great friends. He married Henry's sister, Eleanor; and Prince Edward, the king's eldest son, was more often with this new uncle than in the company of his own father. Earl Simon was very proud of the lad, and took great delight in teaching him the arts of war and statecraft. Indeed the courage and skill of the young Prince, and his wise rule later as king, were the results of this patient love and teaching, and one of the earl's greatest sorrows was the fact that his pupil and friend should fight against him at the head of the royal armies. When the young Prince proved victorious, De Montfort, facing defeat and death, could still rejoice in the courage and skill of his former pupil. "It was from me, he learned of it," he cried proudly, as he watched the soldierly advance of the royal leader.

The friendship of the king did not long continue. Earl Simon saw that Henry by his acts of tyranny was bringing ruin on the country, and soon he joined the English nobles in their effort for reform. In 1258 Henry called his barons together to ask for money, and De Montfort and many of the English barons came to this Parliament fully armed. Before granting the King's request they forced him to promise to keep the Great Charter which his father had signed; to call a parliament three times a year; and to replace the royal castles in the hands of Englishmen. These written promises were called the Provisions of Oxford. The king signed them, but he kept them very unwillingly. However, the nobles saw that they were enforced, and for a time the favorites of the king returned to France.

Henry was very angry at the leaders of this movement, and when he at last persuaded the Pope to say that he need not keep the promises which he had made, Earl Simon had to fly from the country. The foreigners again flocked to the English court, and things grew worse than before. At last the English barons decided to rise against the king and sent for De Montfort to lead them. Returning he gathered the barons under his banner, took possession of Dover and London, and prepared for war. At first he was successful. He met the army of the king at Lewes, and for hours the result hung in the balance. Prince Edward proved a gallant leader. With his knights he forced one wing of the Earl's army to flight, but, while he followed, the battle was lost and he returned to find his father a prisoner and to share his fate.

The Earl was now at the head of the kingdom and he at once called together a Parliament. For the first time citizens of the towns sat in an English Parliament with the barons and churchmen.

But the sons of De Montfort were so proud and overbearing that many of the barons left the cause and went over to the side of the vanquished king. Prince Edward, too, escaped from prison and put himself at the head of the king's troops. He met and defeated De Montfort's son, and placing the captured banners in the front of his own army, succeeded in deceiving the old earl. Too late De Montfort discovered his mistake. There was no chance of success, he knew and he pleaded with those who followed him to seek safety in flight;—but none would go. For three long hours the battle raged, De Montfort, facing defeat with which he had won his victories, flung his little band of knights against the enemy. It was to no purpose. One by one they fell till the old earl fought alone. At last he, too, was cut down, and the cause was lost.

But for a time only. At the death of Henry, Edward came to the throne. What he had failed to do by force of arms, De Montfort had long ago accomplished in his friendship with this favorite nephew. Loyalty had kept Edward on his father's side of the contest, but in his heart, he acknowledged the rights of the barons. With his reign came the reforms for which the earl had striven and for which his life had been sacrificed.

Christopher Columbus.

Columbus was born in Genoa, Italy, in the early part of the Fifteenth Century. Genoa was a very beautiful and wealthy city on the coast of the Mediterranean sea. Columbus was a poor boy. He was anxious to get an education, but as there were very few printed books and only a few schools it cost a great deal for one to be educated. When Columbus was fourteen years old he went to Portugal to learn to be a sailor. He had heard that there were many sailors in Portugal and that he could get work there and make some money. Columbus was very fond of studying geography, and while he was in Portugal he made maps, when he was not busy as a sailor, and sold them. Many people believed the earth was flat, but Columbus believed the earth was round. His friends laughed at him for having such funny ideas but Columbus saved his money. He intended some day to buy some ships and make a trip around the world and prove to the people that the earth was round.

Columbus could not save enough money to buy ships and employ sailors for the long voyage around the earth. He made several attempts to borrow money but failed. One day he went to see the King and Queen of Spain. They treated Columbus very politely, but told him that they were so busy that he must come again and they would listen to his plans for a trip around the earth. Columbus waited five years and went to see the good woman. She treated Columbus very kindly. She told him that she would help him, and if she couldn't get the money from Spain she would sell her jewels and give the money to him. Columbus felt very much encouraged. He knew that the good Queen would help him and that he would yet make his voyage.

Three small ships were bought by Columbus. He named the largest ship Santa Maria. It was about 63 feet long and 20 feet wide. On Friday, August 2, 1492, Columbus sailed from Spain, amid the tears and prayers of his friends, who never expected to see him again. Many weeks passed and no land was seen by Columbus and his sailors. The sailors became very much alarmed and wanted to turn back, but Columbus' courage never faltered.

At last Columbus and his sailors saw a stick and limbs of trees floating on the water, and they knew that they were near land.

On Friday, October 12, 1492, Columbus and his men landed on a small island near Cuba. Columbus named this island San Salvador, which means "Holy Savior."

Columbus with his men stayed several months on that island. Columbus did not know that he was near America. He thought he was near the coast of India. Columbus and his men returned to Spain and the people received him with great honor.

Before Columbus died he made three other voyages to the West India Islands. He established a settlement on the Island of Hayti, and traveled over many of the other islands. Columbus was made governor of the land he had discovered, but he never knew that he had found America. As governor, Columbus was disliked, because he was an Italian. The people of Hayti succeeded in having Columbus expelled from office and sent back to Spain chained as prisoner. Queen

Isabella died and many of Columbus' friends deserted him. His last days were very sad. He died a poor man. He was buried in Spain.—School Helper.

WHEELING.

Two big surprises, on the eve of the 28th ult., were made in the happy, comfortable domicile, No. 55 South York Street, Wheeling Island, of Mr. and Mrs. William R. Alexander, when a party of deaf-mutes assembled in the parlor to "ambush" Mrs. Charles B. Deem, who was called in unsuspecting from the outside. She was at an honorary dinner. About one hour later Charles, whom she gave up looking for, on account of being detained on pressing business, came in on the Parkersburg train. The affair was mostly spent in playing new counting games. Hot coffee, sandwiches and cakes were served to all in the dining-room. Those immensely pleased with the occasion were: Misses Ada Anderson, Ada Ryan, Grace Littleton, Ida and Lizzie Willard, Mr. and Mrs. Frazier Mr. and Mrs. Robb, Mr. and Mrs. Bremer, Mr. and Mrs. Charles M. Weiner, Mrs. Anna Tyles and Messrs. John H. V. Fowler, of Wheelburg, W. Va., Elmar Conway, Lawrence Knuth, Julius Andre, Lee Harris, Marion Giffen and Thomas Littleton.

Mr. Ora C. Maust spent two days of his vacation here, being registered at Hotel Brunswick upon arriving here from Cleveland, O. He left for Pittsburgh, Pa., on Saturday evening, September 21st, and thence to his home in Uniontown, Pa. He works in the Herald office.

Miss Ada L. Ryan, of National Road, visited her folks in Martin's Ferry, O., for one week.

Mr. Emory Barker, who had been here for some time, has secured a titorial position in Mingo Junction, O.

A very enjoyable outing occurred at Camp Rest, several miles up Ohio River, on Labor Day. Misses Ada J. Anderson and Grace Littleton, Mr. and Mrs. William R. Alexander, Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Bremer, and Mr. and Mrs. Charles M. Weiner, Messrs. Muriel Weiderbusch, Julius Andre, David Williams, Lawrence Knuth, and Lawrence Nesbitt being there. They hope to go there again, provided with lepees.

Miss Laura May and Mr. Charles E. Blackburn, a long time ago, shook the dust of Wheeling off from their shoes; the unknown whereabouts of the former, and the latter returning to the parental home in Steubenville, O., as also Miss Esther Schlick, of Dunkirk, Ind., after several months' stay with her married sister.

Miss Elizabeth Steenrod leaves this month for Asheville, N. C. Her health there was much improved the last time.

Mrs. Charles B. Deem, nee Miss C. A. Jepson, of Parkersburg, W. Va., spent a couple of weeks, lasting till September 29th, with her parents in South Wheeling, and also music friends. It was her first visit since she wedded.

Miss Nettie Goff, who has been making her home with Miss Elizabeth Davis on Eighth Street, leaves here the latter part of October, to live permanently with her uncle and aunt in Moundsville, W. Va.

Our friend, ex-Wheelingite, Miss Mae E. Comfort, down the Pacific slope, has become a suffragist, having been registered as voter. We receive picture cards and an interesting letter from her. She dwells in Los Angeles, Cal.

A. M. King, furniture agent of Grand Rapids, Mich., was in town on business, and was mostly in company with Mr. William Halpin of evenings.

Securing knowledge upon a call, Miss Laura Montgomery severs her location at Mozart Hill, and moves with her mother to Columbus, O., by November 1st. They are transacting in real estate and personal property line, since her father died last year.

B.

When we speak of joy we do not speak of something we are after, but of something that will come to us when we are after God and duty.

"In a Minute."

"Well, well, don't fret; I'll be there in a minute."

But, my friend, a minute means a good deal, notwithstanding you affect to hold it of no consequence. Did you ever stop to think what may happen in a minute? No. Well, while you are murdering a minute for yourself and one for me, before you get ready to sit down to the business we have in hand, I will amuse you by telling you some things that will happen meantime.

In a minute we shall be whirled around on the outside of the earth by its diurnal motion a distance of thirteen miles. At the same time we shall have gone along with the earth, in its grand journey around the sun, 1,080 miles. Pretty quick traveling, you say? Why that is slow work compared with the rate of travel of the light which just now reflected from that mirror, made you wink. A minute ago that ray was 11,160,000 miles away.

In a minute, all over the world, about eighty new-born infants have each raised a wail of protest while as many more human beings, weary with the struggles of life, have opened their lips to utter their last sigh.

In a minute the lowest sound your ear can catch has been made by 990 vibrations, while the highest tone reached you after making 2,228,000 vibrations.

In a minute an express train goes a mile and an average walker has gotten over sixteen rods.

In each minute in the United States, night and day, all the year around, twenty-four barrels of beer have to go down 12,096 throats, and 4,830 bushels of grain have come to bin.—Cleveland Press.

The Passenger Pigeon.

In the days gone by, when the wigwags of the red men were scattered all through the woods bordering the Atlantic Coast, there were many wild animals and birds that we never see to-day. One of the most important of these was the wild pigeon, Wascowan, the wanderer, as the Indians called him. Every spring and autumn mighty flocks of these birds passed northward and southward. The coming of the passenger pigeons was a great event to the red man, always celebrated with feasting and rejoicing, for roast pigeon was one of his favorite dainties. In the early days of the coming of the white men, and for many years afterwards, the huge flocks continued to migrate northward in the spring and return to the South for the winter. So immense were these flocks that it sometimes took five hours for one to pass a given spot.

The sun was darkened by the clouds of pigeons, and great branches of trees on which they alighted were broken down by their weight. The children went out and killed them with sticks, and wagon-loads of them were peddled through the streets.

On their journeyings, the birds chose roosts here and there, where they remained as long as they could obtain food. They were willing to take a half day's flight to procure a good meal rather than abandon a favorite roost.

Gradually, as the country became more and more settled, and their food grew poorer and less abundant, the flocks of semi-annual visitors grew smaller and smaller. Their numbers were greatly diminished also by the wholesale slaughter which took place twice a year, and to-day the Smithsonian Institution at Washington has announced that it cannot procure one living specimen of the wild passenger pigeon.—Sel.

How Presidents and Vice Presidents Are Elected

The voters of the Union do not vote directly for President and Vice-President.

Each state provides for the choosing of Electors, for each congressional district in said state or for each congressional representative the state is entitled to, and also two Electors at Large from each state, and it these Electors that are voted for by the citizens of respective states.

The candidates for electors are nominated under state laws in some states, and in other states under party rules or regulations.

State laws, or party rules, cover the naming of the Electors in every state in the Union.

The legal number of Electors the state is entitled to, receiving the highest number of votes at the presidential election in November, become the Electoral College of the state. There is no law compelling the Electors to vote for the candidates for President or Vice-President who are named upon the ticket or tickets.

Article XII. of the Federal Constitutional Amendments, declared in force September 25, 1804, provides as follows:

"First—The Electors shall meet in their respective states and vote, by ballot, for President and Vice-President, one of whom at least shall not be an inhabitant of the same state with themselves.

"They shall name in their ballots the person voted for as President, and in distinct ballots the person voted for as Vice-President; and they shall make distinct lists of all persons voted for as President, and of all persons voted for as Vice-President, and of the number of votes for each; which lists they shall sign and certify and transmit sealed to the seat of the Government of the United States, directed to the President of the Senate.

"The President of the Senate shall, in the presence of the Senate and House of Representatives, open all the certificates and the votes shall then be counted.

"The person having the greatest number of votes for President shall be President, if such number be a majority of the whole number of Electors appointed; and if no person have such majority, then from the persons having the highest number, not exceeding three, on the list of those voted for as President, the House of Representatives shall choose immediately, by ballot, the President.

"But in choosing the President votes shall be taken by states, the representation from each state having one vote; a quorum for this purpose shall consist of a members or members from two thirds of the states and a majority of all the states shall be necessary to a choice.

"And if the House of Representatives shall not choose a President, whenever the right of choice shall devolve upon them, before the 4th day of March next following, then the Vice-President shall act as President, as in the case of the death or other constitutional disability of the President.

"Second—The person having the greatest number of votes as Vice-President shall be the Vice-President, if such number be a majority of the whole number of Electors appointed, and if no person have a majority, then from the two highest numbers on the list the Senate shall choose the Vice-President.

"A quorum for the purpose shall consist of two thirds of the whole number of Senators, and a majority of the whole number shall be necessary to a choice."

In case of the removal, death, resignation or inability of both the President and Vice-President, the presidential succession act, passed by the Forty-ninth Congress in 1886, provides that the Secretary of State shall act as President until the disability of the President or Vice-President is removed, or a President is elected.

If there be no Secretary of State, then the Secretary of the Treasury shall act; and the order of succession is: Secretary of War, Attorney-General, Postmaster-General, Secretary of the Navy, and the Secretary of the Interior.

The act applies only to such Cabinet officers as shall have been appointed by the consent of the Senate, and are eligible under the Constitution to the Presidency.

Upon taking office the Acting President must convene Congress, if it is not at that time in session, in extraordinary session, giving notice of twenty days.

The Electoral Colleges of the several states meet on the first Wednesday of December after the presidential election.

The Congress meets in joint session to count the votes on the second Wednesday of the February following.

ALABAMA.

A few weeks ago the following card was mailed to the Deaf of Alabama:

"That we, residents of the State, should organize the State Association of the Deaf to be known as the Alabama Association of the Deaf is the sentiment prevailing among the Deaf in the State.

The first convention of the Association will be in session in Birmingham, Ala., October 4-5, included in the Alabama State Fair week. The rates on all lines during that week will be low and cheap.

It is hoped that Rules and By-Laws governing the Association will be adopted at this meeting.

Bring your friends with you. Come and give your hand towards the launching of our much-needed Association.

WALTER BELL, JOE BROCATO, JOHN C. SMITH, W. E. YOUNG, ALTON BELL, JOHN G. LOGAN, OSCAR ROBERTS, D. H. CHURN and Others.

Please notify Walter Bell whether or not you will come.

In response to the card, about sixty of the leading deaf people of the state met in the lecture room of the new Y. M. C. A. building of the city, for the purpose mentioned in the card.

Mr. Walter Bell, of Birmingham, called the meeting to order and invited Rev. J. W. Michaels to invoke the blessing and help of the Lord in organizing the Association.

Prof. W. S. Johnson, of Talladega, was unanimously elected chairman, Mr. Osce Roberts, a deaf business man of the city of Birmingham welcomed the visiting deaf in a neat little speech, which gave an outline of the birth and rapid growth of the city, from a blacksmith shop and a country cross roads store in 1872, to the present magnificent city of more than 125,000 population.

Prof. McCandless made the response.

Mr. Joe Brocato addressed the Convention on, "The Deaf without an Association," and Mr. Walter Bell on the benefit of an Association.

The chairman appointed Messrs. Roberts, Robertson and Young, a committee to look over a Constitution and By-Laws which had been previously prepared for the Association. The said Constitution and By-Laws was favorably reported upon, and after a few corrections by the Convention was accepted.

The committee on nominations submitted its report as follows: President, Mr. Osce Roberts; Vice-President, Mr. Alton Bell; Secretary, Mr. Arthur Bell; Treasurer, Mr. Joe Brocato; all of Birmingham.

Prof. Hofsteater, of Talladega, was added as a member of the Executive Committee.

The society now being organized impromptu speeches were made and a little business done, in which it was decided to hold a Convention at some convenient time and place in 1913.

Prof. McFarlane spoke of the N. A. D., and wished to know the sentiment of the convention as to the administration of Mr. Hanson, and other matters pertaining to his work. He was given consent to put them down as favoring him for re-election but many of those present thought the taking up of such a matter a little too early.

The Deaf present took in the State Fair during Saturday, and a religious service at Wesley Chapel Sunday morning, by Rev. T. W. Michaels brought the meeting to a close.

Mr. Thomas, a Fanwoodite, has a remarkable rise by cobbling in twenty years, and now he is the owner of a handsome house on Honeritta Street.

Mr. and Mrs. Chas. W. Stowell, spent a week's vacation trolleying through Buffalo, Rochester, and Niagara Falls. While at Niagara Falls, Mrs. N. Moore and her amiable companion, Mrs. Wilson, invited us to the former's cozy cottage at Center Island, Toronto, Can., and enjoyed their hospitality. The next day Mrs. Wilson kindly took us to the Toronto-Exposition Grounds, and also many places of interest. The exhibits at the Exposition were the finest we ever saw. Mrs. Moore contemplates a trip to Europe after her winter in California.

TREASURY IN HEALTHY CONDITION.

The treasurer's report shows a balance of $342.01 in the treasury on October 1st. After paying $250 for printing proceedings, there will still be $92 left for other purposes. We can use it all, and could use much more to advantage, especially in combating the spread of the pure oral method. Will the deaf back the N. A. D. in its efforts to sustain the sign-language, or will they lie down and let the oralists have their way undisputed? The N. A. D. is making some progress, and I believe it will win in the end; but more progress would be made if we received better support.

OLOF HANSON.
SEATTLE, Oct. 5, 1912.

From Saratoga.

Mr. and Mrs. Adolph Pfeiffer, of New York City, returned home from a couple of months' ideal vacation on the shores of Lake George. The advantage of a vacation is best obtained in complete change of air and surroundings. It makes one feel as though they had landed into a new world. The old routine of life vanishes. The roar of the waves replaces the roar of the cars. Steamboats, yachts, sail and row-boats marshal into line, looking entirely from rushing automobiles and city life. When you take a vacation, get into a new world, and you will return bright as a new dollar.

Arthur Ensforth, a graduate of the Rome School, who owns a fine farm property, near East Guilford, was treated to the rare sight of a deer on his place. It was a fine doe that had strayed from the northern section. Near Abbott Street and Broad Avenue, in Binghamton, a deer was seen, which goes to show that Fred King is not yet quite out of the woods.

ONEIDA, Sept. 23.—Refusing to allow the strong Frankfort Independents a single hit and shutting them out without a run, Town send of the O. C. L. baseball team made a Central New York record yesterday, when the locals triumphed over the visitors by a score of 6 to 0.

Shutting out the visitors, who were recruited from among the best talent in the Mohawk valley, was no easy trick, but Townsend backed by good fielding and timely hitting, had little trouble in bringing it about. But three of the visitors got to first base and but one as far as second. In winning this game Townsend has pitched three games in succession without being scored on.

McAllister, the mute pitcher, one of the best in the neighborhood of Utica, was in the box for the visitors, and was hit rather hard. Herlan, the clever second baseman of the locals who is also a mute, saluted his friend with a clean home run drive to right center the first time up. Rutan and Townsend hammered out doubles at a time when they counted. Herlan, aside from his home run drive, featured by stealing home in the fifth.—Syracuse Herald.

ROME, Oct. 3.—Prof. E. A. Gruber, principal of the School for the Deaf, gave a talk in the First M. E. Chapel last evening on "What We Do and How We Do It." His talks being principally as to the deaf, their customs, principles and general being. He cautioned his hearers about referring to the deaf as "dummies," "mutes," etc., and said they were neither, that they were simply deaf people. "Dummies," he said, "referred to the figures in show windows on which styles are shown, and they are also found in front of cigar stores, and mutes cannot make sounds, while the deaf are taught to articulate and can make a lot of noises.—Syracuse Journal.

NEW YORK.

News items for this column, should be sent direct to the DEAF-MUTES' JOURNAL, Station M, New York.

A few words of information in a letter or on a postal card is sufficient. We will do the rest.

On Wednesday, October 9th, Rev. and Mrs. John H. Keiser reached the fifth anniversary of their wedding day, and were made doubly conscious of the quick flight of time by a host of friends, who assembled at their temporary abode on West 145th Street. This is the home of Rev. Dr. and Mrs. Chamberlain, and they very kindly lent the use of the entire house for the purposes of the "wooden wedding" celebration.

The moving spirit, as also the active worker, in the affair was Mrs. J. H. McCluskey. She attended to all the work of securing contributions for a purse to be presented to the bride and groom of five years ago. She also was the one to see that the salads and ice cream and its concomitants of cake were smuggled in and hidden from prying eyes.

At eight o'clock, Rev. Mr. Keiser was wearing out Fabers and straining his mental machinery in thinking up and writing down news items for the JOURNAL, when a big crowd rushed in on him. He and his lovely better-half were showered with congratulations and eventually made to face Mr. Edwin A. Hodgson who, standing on a chair in the dining room, addressed them in behalf of the friends assembled and others who could not come, while little Ruth Keiser looked on in wonderment. He told them how glad their numerous friends were that health and happiness and youthfulness had laughed at scorn the depredations of the years, and kept them still looking like the bride and groom of five years ago. He trusted that the coming years would find them prospering, progressing and living useful and helpful lives.

Mrs. McCluskey then stepped forward and presented Mrs. Keiser with an immense cluster of American beauty roses. Turning to Mr. Keiser, she presented a ribbon-tied package, which when opened disclosed a small wooden cupboard. Opening the door of the cupboard, the astonished Mr. Keiser blushed with pleasure to behold a number of gold coins and a lot of paper currency. While Mr. Keiser was gazing in bewilderment at his little board of gold, Miss Myra Barrager usurped the chair and began an address in behalf of their Fanwood friends. In sign-language and finger talk, Miss Barrager is a prima donna. She can make her fingers sing, and in gestures is capable of striking all the chords, from basso profundo to tremolo agitata. Therefore, one can imagine how well she gave expression to the Fanwood spirit, and how lucidly and effectively she depicted the pridelike pleasure of Fanwood's Principal and teachers in these two graduates who were proving by their sterling worth the benefits of the curriculum of the school. Miss Barrager then presented a package tied in the buff and blue ribbons of Fanwood, on which was inscribed: "No quarter! From Fanwood."

When the cover was removed a crayon box was disclosed, and upon sliding back the lid, reposing among cotton batting was seen a handful of silver.

Rev. Mr. Keiser made quite a nice response, and Mrs. Keiser, blushing like a June rose, also said words of simple thankfulness.

Then came the refreshments of salads, ice cream, cake, etc.

Those who contributed to the purse, and most of whom were present were:

Miss V. Gallaudet, Miss E. Gallaudet, Miss K. Turner, Miss L. Turner, Miss Alice Judge, Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Thomas, Mr. I. N. Soper, Mr. and Mrs. Halsey, Mrs. Buhle, Mr. J. Fitzgerald, Mrs. McCluskey, Mr. and Mrs. Dickerson, Mr. and Mrs. Lounsbury, Mr. Pfandler, Miss Brannfuhr, Mr. and Mrs. Elsworth, Mr. LeClercq, Mr. E. A. Hodgson, Mr. Anfort, Miss Kent, Miss Craig, Mr. and Mrs. H. S. Lewis, Mr. Geo. Rau, Mr. A. C. Stern, Mr. Beuerman, Miss S. C. Howard, Mrs. Rappolt, Miss Lindhoff, Miss Stokes, Miss Caddy, Miss E. Anderson, Mr. Harry Anderson, Mrs. Fosmire, Mr. and Mrs. Rembeck, Mrs. McKeran, Mr. V. Anderson, Mr. R. Thompson, Mr. Spiegel, Mr. and Mrs. Juhring, Mr. A. H. Eger, Mr. F. G. King, Mrs. Kinsey, Mr. and Mrs. F. B. Thompson, Mr. and Mrs. C. Q. Mann, Miss Enrick, Mr. and Mrs. A. A. Barnes.

The Fanwood contributors included Principal Currier, Dr. Fox, Misses Burchard, Berry, Hall, Le Prince, Ruggles, Stryker, Barrager, and Mr. Burdick.

Camping is growing in popularity among the deaf. A couple of years ago, Camp Proteus at Highland Beach, N. J., was bossed by a select quartette, chief of whom was Edward Rappolt, with Rev. John H. Keiser, then a student at Gallaudet, as cook, Anthony C. Reiff as dishwasher, and Murray Campbell as treasurer. From time to time the camp was enlivened with the presence of Louis A. Cohen, Wesley Van Tassel, Eugene V. Moeslein and William L. Hanson. The big 12 x 14 tent sheltered twenty-five at one time, and the antics of the deaf campers gave them a reputation for jollity that many another camp on the beach envied. It mattered not whether it rained, or blew a nor'easter, the deaf were irrepressible, and took wind and weather, shortage of grub, leaky tent and refractory stove, with the same equable spirit, while others fretted and swore and finally packed up and left. The big tent rots in an attic at Highland Beach, the cooking utensils long since rusted away, and Uncle Sam, to whom the strip of beach belonged, has barred campers as too near the Sandy Hook Reservation, but the memory of the good times remains. The Clark Deaf-Mutes have a splendid place at Arverne Beach. This year they put up a pretentious portable house, dug a cellar, and have entertained scores of friends and relatives. The cooking they turn out is quite wonderful, not that it would make the Waldorf chef jealous, but it is so much relished by guests that a second invitation is as eagerly accepted as the first. The mile of beach is fine for their foot races, and the whole ocean is at their front door. With such a place to spend their vacations, it is no wonder the members are always in trim for athletic contests.

Bill Renner and Alfred Stern camped out at Sand's Point for two summers. They spent the entire time in risking their lives in a trail cockle-shell of a catboat on the Sound, or holding the guy ropes of the tent when one of the sudden squalls struck it. Their hair-breadth escapes would fill a volume, and turn their mothers' hair snow white. Still those two irresponsibles enjoyed the camp grub, the duckings, the sunbaths and the life free from the restraints and clothes of civilization. They'd gladly do it all over again, but Alf's wife won't let him, and Bill is not as reckless as formerly.

The Alphabet boys have also gone in for camping this year, and as the experiment has proved enjoyable they are likely to repeat it on a larger scale next year.

There are plenty of excellent camping grounds sufficiently near the city to allow community. The shores of Long Island Sound are always favorite camp sites. Recently the Interstate Park, at the foot of the Palisades, has become one of the most popular places for campers near New York. There are other places further south, along the Jersey Coast, and even inland along the rivers. Next year will see a dozen camping parties of deaf people enjoying life under canvas. It is inexpensive, healthful, and far more enjoyable than hotel and boarding house life, providing one selects his companions with care, has the proper outfit, is willing to rough it, and has a reserve fund of patience. Once they get the camping fever they will never forsake it for the mollycoddle hotel with its eternal round of clothes and dinners and dances.

"Merry" Campbell is having the time of his life up in the Northern counties of New York State, where the apples redden on the trees, and the grapes ripen in the genial sunshine; where the gorgeous hued potato bug gorges on the vine, and the outworn and grasshopper make the farmer's life a burden. Back to nature went Merry with an enthusiasm that was boundless, and great the information he gleaned over snake fences, when at a crook of his finger the former left his seythe and hastened to discourse of fertilizers, drainage, acreage yields, for the benefit of our erstwhile city boon companion. And for all this Merry was not happy. His wrath, long smoldering, burst into flame, and he unloaded a vitriolic epistle, primarily on the so-called "interpreters," who lent him their ears and wig-wagged back the usual drawl of the men of the hoe. Knowing the short temper of our embryonic farmer, we wonder that any of the tribe of interpreters is left alive. "Consider," howls Merry, "my patience and forbearance, when after standing in the hot sunshine for half an hour, while the farmer and my companion jawed and spat and stabbed the horizon with badly maintained fingers, till I felt sure they were taking about real agriculture, and I was in for a lot of information, to have my companion, at the end of the flood of oratory turn to me, and pointing to a distant part of the field, spell 'Potatoes.' Wouldn't that jar you, Bill, you baldheaded mountaineer." Well, Merry, we have all been there, but the farmers are a rich breed, and education is universal, so supposing next time you drop your oralism and fall back on pad and pencil. Then you can tell the interpreters to go to Hellgoland.

The Clark Deaf-Mutes' Athletic Association held their first whist party at the masonic room of the Park and Tilford Building, Lenox Avenue and 126th Street, on Saturday evening, October 12th.

The attendance was over one hundred and fifty. The prizes, twenty in all, were won by the following named ladies and gentlemen: Mrs. A. C. Bachrach, Mrs. S. Lowenherz, Mrs. M. Loew, Mrs. S. Loew, Mrs. M. Kenner, Miss Nettie Miller, Miss Freyer, Mrs. B. Changnon, Messrs. William Taylor, J. H. Kenyon, M. Eisen, S. Samuels, Charles Wolf, H. Friedman, A. Bascher, Zeess, Steinhäuser, S. Leich, M. Moses.

After the prizes were awarded, refreshments consisting of ice cream and cake were served. Dancing was also indulged in, but soon the clock pointed to twelve midnight, and another successful venture of the Clark boys came to an end.

Among out-of-town people present were Mr. J. H. Kenyon, of Syracuse, N. Y., who won second prize for the men, and Mr. J. M. Doyle, of Toronto, Canada.

The little god Luck is surely roosting on the roof tree of Erwin B. Ernst's cottage in Jersey City, N. Y. Last spring he purchased a thirty-foot motor boat, minus the engine, and had it towed to an anchorage in the Hackensack River. Three months later just such a motor, propelling a Panhard automobile, bucked an elm tree near his doorway, and when the owner crawled from beneath the wreck he gave the whole devil-wagon to Erwin for a sum considerably under a hundred dollars. Erwin detached the motor and installed it in his boat, tinkered around the battered automobile for a while, and finally sold it to a total stranger for a sum in three figures. Now Erwin is praying his luck will last and an aeroplane drop in his back yard.

There's a modest young man, a resident of Brooklyn, who tries never to let on he is deaf. If a gentleman stops him on the street and speaks to him, he listens attentively, surmises the man is asking for directions, nods wisely and points "two blocks down, one block south," then he waves a cheerful adieu and hot foots it out of the neighborhood. It doesn't matter whether the man is asking for a match or telling him there's a man being murdered on the next block, the formula never varies: "Two blocks down, one block south."

Some days his friends will call on him in the hospital and learn how hard a pile-driver can hit, and a three-sling machine muss one up. Still his prescription saves a lot of bother.

Mr. and Mrs. A. A. Barnes patronize a moving-picture theatre, three blocks from their domicile. One day the screen showed a wildcat engine dashing down a steep incline with a line of freight cars jolting behind. As the train emerged from the dim perspective and headed for the audience, a little girl gathering flowers by the track, stepped right in front of the onrushing train. In another minute she would be ground to pieces. Up from his seat jumped Mr. Barnes, and waved frantically at the little girl to get out of the way. Mrs. Barnes grabbed his coat tails, and then he suddenly realized where he was, and plumped down in his seat. The audience tittered, but Mr. Barnes didn't care.

For the first time in the history of the College of the City of New York, the freshmen captured the flag rush. Aaron S. MacLair, a brother of Miss Elizabeth S. MacLair and a member of the Freshie Class, of 1916, took an active part in the encounter. Due to the fact that he was kept in the reserve squadron, he was not able to do all that he would like to have done, namely of capturing the flag; but still he managed to give assistance, this being shown by his torn shirt and the blows he took and gave. The Freshies will wear red cravats and colored socks to spite the Sophs.

Have you been approached with a subscription list by Rev. Mr. Keiser, Anthony Capelli, John F. O'Brien, Louis A. Cohen, Edward Rappolt? No! Then don't balk when you see them tacking your way with their paper. Better still, rush right over and ask them about it. You'll be heartily sorry if you are left out. It is for a — no, I won't tell it here — let them whisper the secret to you. The alacrity with which you will dig down into your jeans, will surprise you. Big doings? Sure!

William Waldorf Watson Weillier Thomas has a commutation ticket on the Pennsylvania Railroad between New York and Long Beach, L. I. The best fishing grounds are just off the beach, and between puffs of his corn cob, Thomas yanks the piscatorial prey from the briny deep. He tells of some wonderful catches, but the Editor is jealous of the JOURNAL's reputation for veracity, so space is denied his record.

Thursday evening, October 24th, Rev. Mr. Keiser will give a reading at Trinity Chapel, on Rector Street, Newark, N. J. His subject will be Rider H. Haggard's famous novel, "She." No admission fee is charged. Everybody welcome. The chapel is only half an hour from New York by the new Hudson tube, and New Yorkers attending will find the reading well worth the journey.

Don't forget Dr. Fox's lecture in Intercession Hall, Saturday evening, October 19th. A large attendance should greet the lecturer — first because his subject is of educational interest, and second, we should show our appreciation of his efforts to amuse and instruct, and third, because it is given to help along a worthy cause.

Jersey did not agree with him, Edward C. Elsworth has transferred his lares and penates to the most salubrious section of Washington Heights. With his wife he is cozily domiciled a few doors East of St. Ann's Church.

came to New York last week to see the series at the Polo Grounds between the Giants and Red Sox. Messrs. Bachrach and Gomprecht saw the Saturday game in detail at Madison Square Garden.

An Interesting Occasion

The dedication at the School for the Deaf of Johnson Hall occurred in Talladega, Alabama, on Sunday, September 29th. A portrait of Dr. Joseph Johnson was unveiled and also a handsome bronze memorial tablet to the memory of Mrs. Emily Johnson, his wife, were unveiled.

Both the portrait and the tablet were the tribute of the present and former pupils of the school and was an exhibition of the love and affection that they feel for these two good people who had done so much for them and for their elevation.

Prof. Connor entered the Georgia School for the Deaf as a learner at 15 years of age, in January, 1857, and Dr. Johnson had entered at the age of 16, several years before. These two were together for one year only, but they were lifelong friends. Prof. Connor says he received his inspiration from Dr. Joe Johnson, to whom he owed so much in making such a success of the Georgia School for the Deaf. Another link that bound them was that as a boy of nine, he was in school with Miss Emily Darden, afterward Mrs. Joseph H. Johnson.

Mr. Osce Roberts of Birmingham, a former pupil paid an eloquent and touching tribute to Dr. Johnson in the beautiful language of signs.

Those in attendance were principally deaf people, pupils and ex-pupils of the school, but many citizens of Talladega were also present.

Prof. Connor spoke (in signs) feelingly of the love and high regard that he always felt for Dr. Johnson.

Prof. Weston Jenkins interpreted the remarks of Mr. Roberts and Prof. Connor for the benefit of the hearing people who were present. — Georgia School Helper.

The Kaiser's English

English is said to have been the language employed at the recent interview between the German Emperor and the Czar. The Kaiser has more than once shown his preference for English as a means of communication in circumstances where German cannot be employed. At a banquet given on the occasion of the first state visit to Hagu, the admiral at the head of the Dutch navy addressed the imperial guest in French. The Kaiser replied in English, observing that he was a British admiral and that English was the most appropriate language for seamen to employ. — London Chronicle.

Saturday evening, October 5th, an Apple Social was given in All Souls' Hall, for the benefit of the Parish House Building Fund. It was very well attended by our people. Danter, Mrs. Laura M. Pennell, and Mrs. Emily R. Gunkel. The committee is much gratified by the success of the social, the first of the kind held here, and thankful to all who helped to make it so. Rochester, N. Y.

Want a laugh? Then listen. One evening a party was given and the guests were served with pop-corn balls, which happened to be sticky. One of the guests, who was unusually tall, bumped his head quite severely on a gas fixture just as he was about to enter with a finger-bowl. The tall man thinking it was meant for him, scooped some water up in his hand, and sopped his aching bump. The others, of course, hard a hard time keeping their faces straight, and when the man with the bump said his mistake his pain vanished with laughter.

Miss Clara Novo is employed at the Deaf-Mute Institution here, and greatly enjoys her new position.

Mrs. Albert Hochstahl returned recently from her visit to New York City for nine weeks.

BOSTON.

The meeting of the Boston Society was called to order at 8 P. M. at the First United Presbyterian Church, Warren Ave., Boston, by F. W. Bigelow, Chairman of the Committee, presiding, October 23, 1912.

Miss Ethel Bigelow acted as interpreter. Rev. L. B. Thomas, served as recording secretary.

Prayer was offered by Rev. L. B. Thomas, one of the trustees. Mr. Thomas then made a brief statement of facts and possibilities of interest to all, somewhat as follows:

Our treasury shows a balance on hand of $155.08. What shall we do with that. Our membership includes all the deaf resident in the eastern half of Massachusetts, who attend the worshipping assembly or services conducted under the auspices of this Society. For some time no services have been held under our auspices. The "attendance" qualifying a member refers to regular and continued attendance at the Sunday services in the spirit of worship. The chief point in our method of action is that mutual consent of the "mass-meeting" and the trustees is required. Dissent of either of those two parties kills a measure. This protects the interests of the public and of the deaf. Three possible courses of action are open for use. We cannot as a body or Society, join the Evangelical Alliance.

That body is a regularly incorporated organization, and we join individually only as others do. Their Committee on "Work among the Deaf," would have full control of meetings, moneys, minister, etc. Of course that Committee composed of the very best and most consecrated of Boston's Christian men would have only the best interests of the silent people at heart, and would heed their desires and suggestions. Mr. Woodbury, who has served as our trustee so long and efficiently is on that Committee. Full management would rest with that committee, and while petition and protest would be possible to the deaf, the deaf would have no executive voice in settling questions.

Should we decide to operate with the Alliance, our Boston Society would simply drop out of existence. It could be started afresh at any time, however, if circumstances warranted. An organization must be incorporated to receive contributions, etc. Our Boston Society must therefore be incorporated, if we are to seek more money from among our friends. The Trustees favor Co-operation with the Alliance under Rev. Wyand's pastoral leadership, the Alliance being a permanent organization, well organized, incorporated, and manned with the very best workers, and having a good name in the community.

The three courses open, are:—

1st. Co-operate with the Alliance, handing over our money to them to be used, subject to the vote of their Committee on Work for the Deaf. The Boston Society to cease.

2d. Continue as we did, holding our own services independently of others which means incorporation if we are to get more funds.

3d. Continue as in the immediate present. Hold our name, annual meeting, money, etc., but have no services, expenses, etc.

Addressees followed in sign language, by Robert Docharty, E. W. Bigelow, Harry Babbitt, Acheson, Rev. P. Packard, Mr. Zimmer, Patrick Thibodeau and George Holmes, in which some objection was raised to the entering the Alliance work with the present pastor, while on the other hand the deaf were scolded for fickleness in their wish to change too often from one pastor to another. Mr. Zimmer alone spoke in favor of co-operation with the Alliance.

The motion was put before the Society by Harry Babbitt, that the Boston Society continue as in past years an independent work.

The motion was amended by Mrs. Bigelow, that the Society be incorporated and then so continue. This motion was duly discussed.

The motion was withdrawn, and a motion made that the Boston Deaf-Mute Society continue its independent work as in past years, using its present funds (and receiving no fresh funds into its treasury) therefore, reserving sufficient money for incorporating the Society, when the rest of the money is exhausted, such incorporation then to occur. This involves a new group of trustees and a general reorganization at that time the present trustees finding it impossible to serve thereafter.

This motion was seconded and carried. The measure now awaits the consent of the trustees. Mr. Woodbury's report as treasurer of the trustees was read, showing $155.08 in the treasury, September 26, 1912, and accepted.

Mr. Wood's report as Treasurer of the Society was read showing an expenditure of $125.50 against $136.13 received, leaving a balance on the right side of $9.63, and accepted.

On motion by Mr. Babbitt, seconded by Mr. Thibodeau, meeting was adjourned at nine P. M.

LEO B. THOMAS, Sec. pro tem.

After the Annual Meeting of the Boston Society for the Deaf was adjourned, several subjects of interest were discussed. One of the most important of these was brought up by one of the ladies, had reference to furnishing Boston news for the JOURNAL.

This was discussed by several of the prominent deaf people. They all said practically the same thing in different ways, that it was not right for any one to adversely criticize the N. E. G. A.

A petition was immediately written out and signed by many of those present. If there had been more time, a great many more would have signed it, but as they wanted it sent to the editor of the JOURNAL as soon as possible, they did not take it outside of the meeting at all.

Beaver Valley, Pa.

Mr. Harry Bulger, of Economy, and Mrs. R. M. Barker, of Johnstown, took a trip to the valley and called on the silent people. They spent the afternoon of Saturday, September 28th, at the house of Mr. and Mrs. H. L. Judd. Mrs. Barker was the guest at the Bulger for a few days last week.

Melville Woodruff, ex-trucker returned to New Brighton last week and got a position at the pottery on Marion Hill. It is said that he enjoyed his two months rest since he left Freeport.

Rev. B. R. Allabough of Cleveland was at the Christ Episcopal Church September 6th, and gave an interesting sermon about "Good Samaritan." He was accompanied by his daughter, Helen, on the trip, in honor of her birthday. After the sermon Helen was presented with some money by the valley silents. They stayed over night at Mr. and Mrs. Bulger's of Economy.

Mrs. Howard L. Judd spent her week's vacation with her mother at Lisbon, O., and returned home. She says that she would rather stay in Ohio, because the climate is fresher than that in the valley. She was accompanied by Miss Dottie Magee, who lives across the street from the Judds.

William J. Gibson is getting along nicely with his position at the Tribune Publishing Company. He recently was surprised to get his wages raised.

Pat P. Connolly left his old job at the Emerson Saw Works, where he had worked for 27 years, accepting another better position with Asbestos Protected Metal Company. He says he is happy, as he is tired of his long job and never had a chance for more pay.

Lee Gorsuch expects to go back to his old farm near Liverpool, where his parents are going to move in the future.

Robert J. Cook returned to the valley and he worked at the famous steel works in Midland recently. He is now working at the Providence Hospital in Beaver Falls.

Mr. Peter Gillooly, of Woodlawn, the great traveller, called on the Judds one night last week and talked about his trip to the Buffalo Reunion last summer with great interest.

The mutes of the valley gave a surprise party in honor of Audley Pitzer, at his home in Freedom, on the 3d of August. He got a pair of gold cuff buttons, given by the guests, and the evening was spent pleasantly. Light refreshments were served.

William J. Gibson received about 30 postal cards in honor of his 18th anniversary, on the 31st of August.

Billy Gumpf and Lee Gorsuch were invited to a party at the old school house in Beaver Falls. They enjoyed the farmers' old time dance.

While Mrs. H. L. Judd was away in Ohio, she and Mrs. A. Dunn, of Lisbon, were the guests of Ray Zimmerman and folks of Salem, O. About 5 o'clock Mrs. Dunn wanted to leave for home, but Mrs. Judd kept her waiting an hour longer. Later they heard that the very five o'clock car was in a wreck near Salem. They were thankful that they did not take this car, or they might get hurt, as a passenger was hurt in the legs.

Livie J. McManima was out in the east visiting his old friends, and declares that he enjoyed the trip.

Samuel Jones, of Pittsburgh, recent graduate of Edgewood School, got a position with the casket works in Freedom.

Audley Pitzer is another working in the same place.

Willard Memorial Guild
House.

New York.

WHAT WE SET OUT TO DO:

To erect a Memorial to the late Rev. Thomas Gallaudet, D. D., which would fittingly perpetuate his memory in the City in which he lived and labored; emphasize the work among the deaf-mutes to which his life was so signally devoted; and be a practical and useful means of benefiting the silent people (without distinction of denomination) by education both religious and secular, by entertainment, and by a community interest.

WHAT WE HAVE DONE:

We have, through the generosity of many friends, raised a fund of $34,000; we have adopted admirable plans prepared by Messrs. Satterlee & Boyd of New York; we have awarded the contract for the erection of the Guild House to the New York firm of the Hugh Getty Company, and the structure is now in process of erection.

WHAT WE MUST FURTHER DO:

Raise the sum of $5,000 additional: first, to meet the unlooked for contingency of a deeper excavation for the foundation of the building, owing to the unexpected discovery of a section of "made ground" in the lot; and second, to adequately and becomingly furnish the building, that when completed it may fully meet its varied and practical purposes.

Subscriptions, which had been promptly in hand, may be sent to Rev. Arthur H. Judge, 38 West 84th Street, New York City, or to Mr. Ogden D. Budd, Treasurer, 88 Broad Street, New York City.

EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE:

The Rev. Arthur H. Judge, Rector of St. Matthew's Church, 84th Street West, near Central Park, New York.

The Rev. John Chamberlain, D. D., Vicar of St. Ann's Church for Deaf-Mutes, West 148th Street, near Amsterdam Avenue, New York.

Miss Virginia Gallaudet, Greenwich, Conn.

Mr. Ogden D. Budd, Treasurer, 88 Broad Street, New York.

Mr. William J. Taylor, President of the William J. Taylor Company, 5 East 43d Street, New York.
